This week was much better as far as time management. I feel like I have a better grasp of the course and have a better understanding of what is being asked of me throughout the week. GITHub is fairly simple in basic terms and I haven't had any problems with the service this week.

Attending the GTT on Monday was helpful. I was able to have any questions answered and felt better knowing that other students had similar questions. The Burn Up List was also a helpful assignment and I like having something visual to reference in order to keep myself on track with the course.

In the coming week I plan on fine tuning some of the work that I've started by using the information I've learned. There are a few things going on at my job that will make keeping my work schedule difficult, but with carefull planning I should be able to complete all of my assignments on time.

https://github.com/TreblaSiul/Collazo_Albert2_Portfolio.git

In the coming week I plan on fine tuning some of the work that I've started by using the information

I've learned. There are a few things going on at my job that will make keeping my work schedule